Thanks for telling us! Tell us why! The Apple TV 4K is the best version of this product Cupertino has built to date. It's fast, offers excellent video capability, and it has almost every app you can think of, including every live TV streaming service. Still, there's no denying it's pricey. From $179 in Apple HDR10 and the great lineup of 4K titles at Dolby Vision support iTunes store Dolby Atmos support Pricey Siri Remote could soon be changed first In 2015, Apple TV HD includes the same interface as the 2017 Apple TV 4K. However, it is necessary to lack the interior that most should think twice before buying. However, it is still worth considering for specific buyers. Apple great price content doesn't have the same $149 4K similar interface that 4K is much less expensive than the old interior Apple TV offers much more than a better video format versus the 4K HD model. It also supports better audio, offers more storage, and is faster than its predecessor. Break it now... Source: iMore If you bought a TV over the years, the odds are good that you bought while offering 4K resolution. This difference refers to any resolution with a horizontal pixel count of about 4,000. The Apple TV 4K offers a maximum of 3840x2160 pixels, while the HD model supports 1920x1080 pixels. In addition, 4K supports HDR 10, Dolby Vision and Dolby Atmos, unlike older models. With HDR10, photo offers brighter, more realistic colors and more detail. Dolby Vision is hd's vision of Dolby Laboratories, which says the standard goes beyond HDR. Dolby Atmos, in contrast, is the company's fully immersive three-dimensional audio product. Apple TV 4K Dolby Vision and Dolby Atmos are both the first streaming players to be certified. Apple TV 4K has been found on an Apple A10X Fusion CPU vs Apple A8 older model. The A10X has a total of four cores, two of which are considered high performance cores. It has been designed more than 50% faster than the A8. The speed difference isn't nearly as important as it would be on mobile devices like iPhones or iPads, except when it comes to gaming. If you plan to use your Apple TV for gaming, you'll want to get Apple's Arcade subscription service as well as Apple TV 4K. Just make sure you have a compatible game controller, not yet 4K television? You can still buy an Apple TV 4K and take advantage of better interior. Note: Apple TV models both support TVOS 14 and offer the same content, including videos, music, apps, and games. Additionally, both support Cupertino's Apple TV+ premium video service. Apple TV 4K Apple TV HD Released 2017 2015 Price $179/$199 $149 Storage 32GB/64GB 32GB Max Resolution 2160p (4K) 1080p (HD) HDR10 Yes No Dolby Atmos Yes Voice control Siri Siri Apple TV Plus yes yes TVOS 13 compatible yes yes CPU Apple 10X Fusion Apple A8 Wi-Fi 802.11ac Bluetooth 5.0 Bluetooth 4.0 You might think that Apple TV HD is worth it despite the less powerful internal thanks to its low price. However, with only a slight price difference between the two, it has become increasingly difficult to recommend the HD version. Anyone with gamers and 4K televisions should bypass the HD model completely. If you don't have a 4K TV, consider buying one. You will be happy that you did. If you're not into gaming, don't have 4K television (and don't plan to get one Soon), HD is still very good. After all, set-top boxes offer the same content. Otherwise, go with the 4K model. Gamers should buy a 64GB model. Deadline Cupertino could retire both Apple TV 4K and Apple TV HD this fall. Keep this in mind before making a new purchase. A great streaming box with support for both HDR10 and Dolby Vision, the presence of almost every video service, and fast performance, the Apple TV 4K is a worthy addition to the home theater setup of any Apple fan, mainly hampered by its high relative value. Apple TV HD is an aging entertainment box not for most users in 2020. Despite this, it offers great content similar to the 4K model. If you're not into gaming and don't have a 4K TV, find and enjoy one of these on sale. We can earn commissions for purchases using our links. Know more. More.
